Two Day Event: Tackling Disruptive Change

CILTNA invites you to a special two-day event on how to profit from the rapid pace of change facing transportation and logistics professionals today.

Day One: come and discuss with experts the challenges and opportunities arising from disruptive change in the world economy:

- With big policy changes recommended by David Emerson, big infrastructure investments promised by government, and a new roadmap from the Minister of Transport - where do we go from here?
- Taking stock of a post-U.S. election world, what needs to be discussed and who needs to be involved to begin working toward an integrated, long term and modernized sector?
- Recognizing the realities of a trading nation, what needs to happen to position the sector for the next fifteen years' growth?

Day Two: the 2017 CILTNA Transport Outlook Conference will tackle "disruptive change: positioning the sector to grow and prosper"

Where?

The Mississauga Convention Centre
(North West corner of Huronontario Street (HWY 10) & Derry Road West in Mississauga, Ontario)

1:30 – 3:15pm: What does the future look like for goods movement? Automated or autonomous vehicles, drones, pods. A myriad of technologies and approaches to goods movement are being studied or touted as the next big thing. Who’s doing what? What are the potential benefits or costs? What are the opportunities or constraints? This session will try to provide some answers from those in the thick of it. At the same time, the goods movement sector will for the foreseeable future remain a people-based industry. For examples, the trucking industry faces human resources challenges; chronic, long-term driver shortage and the ability to attract the next generation of industry leaders are in most carriers’ minds. The panelists will provide their insights into the current situation, how they see the future and what measures are they undertaking to meet the challenge.

Moderator: David Bradley, CMILT, CEO, Canadian Trucking Alliance
